

Is the Knesset being irradiated by microwaves?

Next-up organization 02 11 2009

Even though most politicians know nothing about the effects of the radiation caused by new technologies, during the last few years they have begun to pay a heavy price in terms of their own health. Faced with the statistics on cancer cases among the members and personnel of the Knesset, the Israeli government has just contracted a specialist company to analyse and measure the artificial microwave radiation emitted by the radio frequencies in the parliament building.

The government publishes the evidence at last

The government is questioning the possible link between a series of cancer cases in the Knesset and the microwave radiation coming from the many relay antennas and other sophisticated technology systems in the building. This concern has been aroused by the number of cases of cancer among the present or former members of the Knesset, but it is the recent death of the deputy יורי שטרן (Yuri Stern) that has focused attention on the possible dangers of the situation.

This coincidence of cases is disturbing, because it has been noted that almost all the members and staff who have contracted cancer spent several years working in the same part of the building.

פורדס גיורא (Giora Fordes) spokesperson for the Knesset, explained the situation: "We are taking all this very seriously. It's true, during these last few years the deputies who have cancer were all sitting next to each other in the same place." This situation often arises where radiation is coming from a wireless beam.

She added: "Since we are not sure of anything we have called in a private specialist company to find out if there really is a dangerous level of radiation and if so, to decide what to do about it."

The company's task will be to carry out a complete survey of the buildings and assess all the sources of electromagnetic radiation, not only from the cell phone relay antennas, but also from the transformers, under floor heating, electric cables and all the fittings and equipment that emit the electromagnetic fields that might be the cause of these cancer cases, leukemia and other symptoms.

Is the government taking action now because the evidence is so obvious?

In fact this problem did not start yesterday, and the Knesset staff, who had been suffering for several years from various symptoms and pathologies typical of radiation damage from microwave radio frequencies, had acquired a sophisticated measuring device. When the readings were taken they lodged a complaint and a court case was brought through the prosecutor עו שלמה ד"ר (Shlomo Shoham) who is well known in the Knesset since it was his practice that provided legal advice for the Israeli constitution.

Is the Knesset building "a microwave oven"?

Even if the detailed information is classified, the deputies in the Knesset certainly know all about the latest technological developments in lethal and non-lethal weapons using microwave energy that are now in the armoury of the major armies of the world. However it seems they are only now beginning to realise that the microwaves from the relay antennas hidden in the false ceilings of the Knesset building could be endangering their own health and that of their staff.

In her statement of 20 October 2009, the government spokesperson added reassuringly: "Readings of the electromagnetic fields will be taken regularly every two months and tests will start this week. If it is shown that the radiation level is high we will correct the situation immediately so that it does not pose a threat to health."
